YouTube Content Ideas

Three video ideas synthesised by the agent from the rest of this PDF, engineered to plausibly hit 10M views. Each ships with a hook, a thumbnail concept, and a 5-beat outline you can shoot the same week.

1. I Tricked Claude Into Leaking Secrets (It's Still Possible)

HOOK (FIRST 8S)

This researcher just made Claude hand over a stranger's private memories - using nothing but a webpage. I'm going to show you exactly how the attack works, and why every AI agent you use is vulnerable to it right now.

Why it hits 10M: ["The exact exploit is #1 on Hacker News today (ai_search_trends: 'I tricked Claude into leaking your deepest, darkest secrets' tops the trends list) - search demand is already spiking.", "It names the biggest unsolved problem in AI (unaddressed_ai_problems: prompt-injection exfiltration via Claude's web_fetch has no general fix) - fear + curiosity is the strongest click combination.", 'Security breakdowns of mainstream AI tools cross over from builder audiences to general tech viewers (anthropic_claude_news: Claude/Anthropic stories carry mainstream news weight this week), which is how AI videos escape the niche and hit 8 figures.']

Thumbnail: A Claude chat window behind a torn-paper hole with red text 'YOUR SECRETS' leaking through, and a shocked face pointing at the tear.

- 0:00 Cold open - replay the actual attack chain in 20 seconds, then freeze-frame: 'that was someone's private memory file leaving the building.'
- 0:45 What prompt injection actually is, explained with a mailroom analogy anyone can follow.
- 2:30 Step through Ayush Paul's memory-heist chain against Claude's web_fetch guardrails - what the designers got right and where the hole was.
- 5:30 Why this is unsolved everywhere, not just Claude: any agent with private data + untrusted input + an outbound channel can be robbed.
- 8:00 The defense checklist for anyone building with AI agents (egress allowlists, tool isolation, dry-run modes) + CTA: 'subscribe - I break down one real AI failure every week.'

2. OpenAI Built an AI to Hack Itself. It Made GPT Stronger.

HOOK (FIRST 8S)

OpenAI just admitted they built a super-hacker AI called GPT-Red - its only job is to attack their own models. And the scary part? Every attack it lands makes the next GPT harder to break.

Why it hits 10M: ["GPT-Red is fresh mainstream news this cycle (ai_self_improvement_rsi: OpenAI's self-play red-teamer trained GPT-5.6 into its most robust release) - 'AI attacks AI' is an irresistible premise with a real story behind it.", "It's the most concrete public example of recursive self-improvement, the topic the whole AGI debate orbits (ai_self_improvement_rsi: The Conversation's RSI-superintelligence explainer shows durable evergreen demand).", "The same week, models did superhuman research work (global_ai_news: GPT-5.6 Sol disproved a 30-year-old statistics conjecture in 90 minutes) - stacking both stories makes an 'it's happening' narrative that gets shared beyond YouTube."]

Thumbnail: Two robot silhouettes in a boxing ring, one glowing red - caption 'AI vs AI' with an OpenAI logo on the corner post.

- 0:00 Hook - 'the most dangerous hacker OpenAI ever faced is one they built themselves.'
- 1:00 What GPT-Red does: automated red-teaming via self-play, and how its attacks become the next model's training data.
- 3:30 Zoom out: this is a real self-improvement loop - explain RSI in plain language and where GPT-Red sits on that ladder.
- 6:30 The same-week evidence stack: GPT-5.6 Sol killing a 30-year-old math conjecture in 90 minutes, and

3. Your AI Coding Tool Uploaded Your Entire Codebase

HOOK (FIRST 8S)

Developers just caught Grok's coding tool secretly uploading their entire codebases - five gigabytes of private source code - to the cloud. If you use ANY AI coding assistant, you need to see what it's sending home.

Why it hits 10M: ["The Grok CLI scandal is this week's developer outrage story (elon_musk_ai_vision: xAI's tool uploaded 5.10 GiB of user code without consent before being switched off) - Musk-adjacent controversy reliably pulls mainstream traffic.", "It taps the same distrust powering agent-opacity stories (unaddressed_ai_problems: OpenAI's Codex now encrypts agent-to-agent instructions, leaving developers blind) - the 'what is your AI actually doing' anxiety is broad and unserved.", "There's a practical payoff every viewer can act on (new_ai_tools: comparing agent stacks like Vorflux, Codex hardware and Claude Code makes the audit demo concrete), and utility drives saves + rewatches, which the algorithm rewards."]

Thumbnail: A code editor with a huge red upload arrow leaving the screen toward a cloud, caption '5 GB STOLEN?' in warning-tape yellow.

- 0:00 Cold open - the Reddit/Register receipts: outbound traffic logs showing a coding agent shipping a full repo to cloud storage.
- 1:30 What happened with Grok Build, in order: discovery, xAI's response, what 'turned off' does and doesn't mean.
- 4:00 Live audit demo: watch the network egress of three popular AI coding tools on a dummy repo and see exactly what each one sends.
- 7:30 The bigger pattern: Codex encrypting its agent-to-agent traffic - you increasingly cannot see what your tools do with your work.
- 9:30 The 5-step trust checklist for picking an AI coding tool + CTA to grab the checklist in the description.

Quantum + AI

Stories addressing both quantum (qubits, quantum hardware/algorithms) and AI/ML. Pure-quantum or pure-AI items are dropped.

NVIDIA Says AI Decoder Achieved up to 347 X Cut in Quantum Logical Error Rates

QUICK TAKE

NVIDIA reports that its AI-based decoder cut quantum logical error rates by up to 347x, one of the largest error-correction gains yet published. Neural decoding running on GPUs is quickly becoming standard plumbing between quantum processors and useful output. Automation angle: GPU+QPU pipelines will need exactly the orchestration-and-tooling skills you practice with agent workflows - track NVIDIA's CUDA-Q stack.

Decoupling AI for Quantum Control and Calibration

QUICK TAKE

Error-corrected qubit maker Alice & Bob details how it separates the AI models that handle quantum control and calibration from the quantum hardware loop itself. The architecture lets ML tune and stabilize qubits without becoming a single point of failure. Automation angle: their control-vs-model decoupling pattern is the same reliability trick you should use when wiring LLMs into production workflows.

New quantum algorithm could unlock faster AI and scientific computing

QUICK TAKE

Researchers describe a new quantum algorithm that could speed up core linear-algebra routines behind AI and scientific computing. If it holds up on real hardware, quantum subroutines could one day accelerate model training and simulation workloads. Quantum Companies Help Develop Hybrid AI for Immune-Targeting Peptides

QUICK TAKE

Quantum computing companies are collaborating on a hybrid quantum-classical AI system that designs immune-targeting peptides for drug discovery. An Agentic Formalization for Certified Quantum Neural Network Design

QUICK TAKE

This arXiv paper formalizes quantum neural network design theory - expressivity and trainability - into a framework that AI agents can use to design certified QNNs automatically. It is a concrete example of agentic AI doing quantum-ML research design work. Automation angle: agents that navigate formal design spaces are the frontier - the same pattern powers automated workflow synthesis.

Detecting Phishing in Ethereum Networks using Quantum Machine Learning

QUICK TAKE

Researchers benchmarked quantum machine learning (QSVM and variational classifiers) against classical AI methods for spotting phishing in real Ethereum transaction data. QML beat statistical baselines but still trails deep learning, so the authors propose a hybrid quantum-classical ensemble. Automation angle: honest 'quantum ML loses to deep learning today' benchmarks make credible, contrarian content.

AI Self-Improvement (RSI)

Recursive self-improvement, AGI progress, alignment research.

Meet GPT-Red: an LLM super-hacker OpenAI built to make its models safer

QUICK TAKE

OpenAI built GPT-Red, an LLM 'super-hacker' that attacks the company's own models through automated self-play red-teaming, and says training GPT-5.6 against it produced OpenAI's most robust release yet. It is a working loop of AI improving AI: one model discovers exploits, the other retrains against them. Automation angle: adversarial self-play evals are landing in every serious AI shop - learn to build small red-team harnesses for the agents you ship.

Exclusive: As Self-Evolving AI Surges, Humanity's Last Moat Is "Judgment," Says Tian Yuandong

QUICK TAKE

Meta veteran researcher Tian Yuandong argues that as self-evolving AI systems surge, human judgment is the last durable moat - models can now iterate on their own architectures and training recipes faster than people can review them. He frames judgment, not coding, as the skill to cultivate. Automation angle: position your portfolio around judgment-heavy work - evaluating, steering and QA-ing self-improving systems.

Is recursive self-improvement the dawning of AI superintelligence?

QUICK TAKE

The Conversation asks whether recursive self-improvement - AI systems improving their own ability to improve - marks the onset of superintelligence, walking through what current systems can and cannot yet do to their own code and weights. The piece lands as labs openly ship self-play training loops. Automation angle: RSI explainers are evergreen 10M-view territory; anchor one to this week's GPT-Red news.

Form, Not Content? A Preregistered, Placebo-Controlled Evaluation of Learned Error-Conditioned Self-Repair Through Prompts and Weights in Frozen Small Code Models

QUICK TAKE

This preregistered, placebo-controlled arXiv study tests whether small frozen code LLMs genuinely learn from their own failures during AI self-repair, or merely react to the form of a retry prompt. Rigorous placebo controls like this are rare in the self-improvement literature. Automation angle: self-repair loops power every coding agent - knowing when retries actually help cuts your token bills.

TerraZero: Procedural Driving Simulation for Zero-Demonstration Self-Play at Scale

QUICK TAKE

TerraZero is a procedural driving simulator built for zero-demonstration self-play at scale: AI driving agents train entirely against themselves in generated worlds, with no human demonstrations. Self-play at this scale is the same recipe that cracked Go, now applied to embodied AI. Automation angle: self-play data generation is the escape hatch when real training data is scarce - a pattern worth a tutorial.

Bonsai 27B is a full open reasoning model that fits on an iPhone

QUICK TAKE

PrismML compressed its 27B-parameter Bonsai reasoning model to under 4GB - small enough to run fully on an iPhone while keeping ~90% of benchmark performance. On-device reasoning at this size resets the floor for private, offline AI. Automation angle: try an on-device model for latency-free automation steps - 'no cloud, no per-token cost' demos impress clients.

MemOps: Benchmarking Lifecycle Memory Operations in Long-Horizon Conversations

QUICK TAKE

MemOps is a new benchmark for lifecycle memory operations - updating, deleting and consolidating long-term memory across multi-session agent conversations, where existing memory benchmarks only test recall. Memory management, not storage, is the bottleneck it exposes. Automation angle: agent memory hygiene is an unsolved client pain - benchmark literacy here differentiates your builds.

What building Shippy taught us about building agents

QUICK TAKE

AllenAI's Hugging Face post distills hard-won lessons from building Shippy, their coding agent: context management, tool design and recovery loops matter more than model choice. It is a candid field report from a team that ships agents in production. Automation angle: read this before your next agent build - their tool-design checklist maps one-to-one onto Claude Code subagent patterns.

Model Routing Is Simple. Until It Isn't.

QUICK TAKE

IBM Research argues LLM model routing 'is simple until it isn't': naive cheap-vs-smart AI routers break down once tasks mix retrieval, tools and long context. They catalog the failure modes and show when learned routers beat static heuristics. Automation angle: routing is the highest-ROI cost lever in an AI agent stack - an n8n router node that picks the model per task is a great portfolio demo.

Tiptap AI Toolkit

QUICK TAKE

Tiptap released an AI Toolkit that lets models directly edit rich-text documents in real time inside its open-source editor framework. It gives agent builders a drop-in, production-grade document-editing surface. OpenAI finally launches hardware... for Codex

QUICK TAKE

OpenAI launched its first hardware - a device for Codex - rather than the rumored Jony Ive consumer gadget. Dedicated local hardware for a coding agent signals where OpenAI thinks daily developer AI usage is heading. Automation angle: coding-agent hardware raises the bar for 'always-on' automation demos; your cloud-first Claude Code workflows remain the zero-hardware counter-pitch.

Apple Intelligence approved for launch in China with Alibaba's Qwen AI

QUICK TAKE

Apple Intelligence won Chinese regulatory approval to launch with Alibaba's Qwen models handling local AI features. It is the template for region-split AI products: same UX, different model per jurisdiction. Automation angle: multi-model routing by region is a real client requirement - practice provider-swapping in your n8n flows.

Karnataka to roll out comprehensive data centre policy to support infra requirements of AI

QUICK TAKE

Karnataka will roll out a comprehensive data-centre policy to support AI infrastructure, alongside India's first public-sector-led AI University and a state AI Hub. The state is codifying its lead in Indian AI capacity. Automation angle: a state AI University means a flood of new learners - teaching-channel content aimed at them compounds early.

Microsoft patches record number of security vulnerabilities, citing its use of AI

QUICK TAKE

Microsoft's Patch Tuesday fixed a record 570 vulnerabilities, and the company credits AI-driven discovery for surfacing many of them. Simon Willison highlights researcher Ayush Paul's 'memory heist': a prompt-injection chain that tricked Claude's `web_fetch` tool into exfiltrating users' stored memories to an attacker's server. Prompt-injection exfiltration remains fundamentally unsolved for every agent with both private data and network access - affecting anyone deploying tool-using assistants. OpenAI's Codex now encrypts instructions between AI agents, leaving developers blind to internal delegation

OpenAI's Codex now encrypts the instructions a main agent passes to its subagents, leaving developers unable to audit how their own tasks get delegated internally. Nobody is solving agent observability: builders increasingly ship on top of delegation chains they cannot inspect, log or debug. Australian Government Commits to AI Training Protections Under New 'National Framework,' Says Developers Cannot 'Train AI Without the Artist's Control'

QUICK TAKE

Australia's government announced a national AI regulatory framework with mandatory training-data protections, with PM Albanese declaring developers cannot 'train AI without the artist's control.' The 'Australian Standards for AI' would make artist consent a legal requirement rather than a courtesy. Automation angle: consent-and-licensing tooling for AI training data is an open product gap - watch which startups fill it.

Hack suggests AI music generator Suno scraped YouTube for training data

QUICK TAKE

Leaked data from a hack of AI music generator Suno indicates it trained on millions of songs scraped from YouTube, Genius and Deezer, using an employee's credentials-exposed source code as the smoking gun. The revelation lands while Suno reportedly prepares for an IPO, sharpening its legal exposure. Automation angle: training-data provenance audits are about to become a paid service - a niche an automation builder can own.

Music industry launches AI-generated content labels

QUICK TAKE

Major music industry organizations unveiled a standard labeling system distinguishing 'AI-generated' tracks from ones where AI merely assisted. The voluntary labels are a bid to get ahead of regulation and give platforms consistent metadata. Automation angle: build a pipeline that auto-classifies and tags catalogs against the new label spec before distributors mandate it.

BandLab Technologies buys Aiode, an AI music studio built on 'fully-licensed' audio

QUICK TAKE

BandLab Technologies acquired Aiode, an AI music studio trained exclusively on fully-licensed audio, adding a third music-making platform to its stable. The deal shows 'clean training data' becoming an acquisition premium, not just a compliance cost. Automation angle: licensed-data-only AI products are the safe-harbor bet - note this pattern for any generative product you pitch.
